Stork Delivers Baby to Dallas Zoo

(Dallas, TX, Jan. 11, 1996)—At 41 days of age, Korongo made its first media appearance at the Dallas Zoo today as proud, Saddle-billed Stork parents, Adam and Eve, looked on.

“Korongo,” meaning “stork” in Swahili, was hatched on December 1, 1995 and weighed 95 grams (or 3.35 ounces). Now, at approximately 3000 grams (or 6.6 pounds), the chick is ready to take its place in history, according to Chuck Siegel, curator of birds.

“The Saddle-billed Stork has not been bred in captivity anywhere else in the world,” beamed Siegel. “This accomplishment by the Dallas Zoo is the first step in establishing a world-wide, self-sustaining captive population of Saddle-billed Storks. While these storks are not an endangered species, they do live in threatened natural habitats. The knowledge we’ve gained through our breeding success with this species may be applied to other storks which are on the endangered list,” Siegel added.

In addition to being incubated by its parents, Korongo also spent its first eight days in the nest with them. Cold weather and the fear of frostbite prompted Dallas Zoo bird keepers to remove the chick from the nest and begin hand rearing procedures.

Five times a day, keepers dressed in puppet suits to resemble “mom and dad,” fed the chick a diet of mice, smelt, water, calcium supplements and vitamins. They were careful to monitor growth rate and bone development and recorded body weight gains of up to 10 to 12 percent every 24 hours.

Handfeeding continues to control the intake of food, water and supplements, but the schedule has been revised to twice a day. Zoo officials want to make sure that Korongo doesn’t grow too fast so that its delicate bones will be able to support it. The chick, whose sex has not yet been determined, has just begun to stand up.

“Korongo will grow to be at least five feet tall and weigh about 14 pounds,” added Siegel. “If it is a girl, it will have golden yellow eyes. If it’s a boy, his eyes will be black.

Captive Bred Condors Coming to Castle Crags, CA

In mid-February, four captive bred young California Condors are to be released at Castle Crags in eastern San Luis Obispo County, California. These will be the first individuals of the species to be parent-reared in captivity then released into the wild. This release into the Machesna Wilderness Area of Los Padres National Forest will bring the condor’s free-flying population up to 17 birds—a remarkable achievement for a species that was once completely eliminated in the wild when, in the early 1980s, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service captured the last 27 survivors and sent them to breeding facilities.

During the past few years, at least four condors that were released into the wild were killed by power lines and one died from drinking antifreeze. To protect against similar inability to cope with the wild life, this new crop of four birds was parent reared, then put into halfway houses (actually caves) to receive survival training. They have been conditioned to fear man and man made things including power poles. A mock pole was used to give the birds mild shocks when they landed on it.

About a year ago 13 of these 25 pound birds were released into Lion Canyon in the remote part of Santa Barbara County. These releases are a tribute to the efforts of dedicated aviculturists who have gone to great lengths to raise and prepare the young condors for life in the wilderness. Today there are more than 100 hundred condors, most of them in various stages of conditioning for their eventual return to their old habitats.

As many as nine condors are scheduled to be released in the Grand Canyon in northern Arizona. The plans, however, are on hold until at least April because local residents have objected. They don’t want the condors to interfere with grazing, hunting, logging and mining by bringing the Endangered Species Act into play.

There’s a new service starting in this issue... see the Advertiser’s Index on page 63

Our advertisers represent some of the finest products and services available. They contribute greatly to AFA programs and philosophy of supporting American aviculturists rights to maintain their birds, pets and breeders.
Fund Raisers Extraordinary; Long Beach Bird Breeders

by M. J. Hessler

In the fall of 1995, Long Beach Bird Breeders (LBBB) president, Lorrie Duquette, announced a special club project to raise funds for the AFA. The idea started germinating with a casual conversation between Lorrie, her husband, Greg and other LBBB board members.

The very first donation was an anonymous member's check for $1000. Mary Trotter stepped up to donate the first bird. That started donations off at a rapid pace. Members scoured southern California as far south as San Diego and north to the edges of the San Fernando Valley and beyond for donations for a raffle. Tickets were sold everywhere possible, with the stipulation that the winner must be present at the drawing.

On the evening of January 23rd tension and excitement built up as frenzied last minute ticket buyers scrawled their signatures on stacks of tickets. A grand pot-luck dinner that covered a 50 foot table length provided a food fest that more than satisfied empty stomachs.

Over 200 members and friends were gathered to await the drawing of the first ticket. Some folks were so excited when their names were drawn that they jumped out of their seats with yelps of triumph. One new member was so excited about winning that he almost forgot he had no cage to house his new prize. Lucky him; his name was drawn again and he won a cage!

After a fun-filled and very successful raffle, the proceeds were counted up by long time club treasurer, Charlie Hendrix. The amount totaled $7,036 for the AFA.

Very well done, all you members of Long Beach Bird Breeders! The AFA would be able to accomplish more if more clubs demonstrated this kind of enthusiasm and generated this much needed (and appreciated) support. Again, many thanks. •
Bird Lovers and Experts, Meet at the 1996 AFA National Convention
Featuring
Avian Species from Asia
Indonesia, Indochina, Philippines,
Malaysia, India and more
to be held in Concord, CA (near San Francisco)
August 7th to 10th
at the Concord Sheraton
Hotel reservations: $69.00 until 7/25/96 • phone (800) 325-3535

Come early and join the fabulous tours:
Golden Gate Park, San Francisco Zoo Reception,
Downtown San Francisco, California Academy of Sciences,
Martini Winery, Marine World/Africa U.S.A.
and Psittacine Research Project at U.C. Davis

Mingle With World Renowned Avian Specialists including:
Rosemary Low (England), Brian Speer, D.V.M. (USA, California)
Luis Baptista, Ph.D. (USA, California)
Mike Fidler (England), Alan Lieberman (USA, Hawaii)
Matthew M. Vriends, Ph.D. (Holland)
and other featured speakers.

Join the Seminars with some of the top USA experts.
Finch and Softbill Seminar, Pet Bird Behavior Seminar
Don’t Miss the Fun and Excitement of the Grand Raffles and Drawings. Many Fabulous and Expensive Prizes including a variety of exotic birds.

Registration Fees: (before June 15) mem. - $180, non-mem. - $210. After June 15 add $50

for more information contact
AFA, PO Box 56218, Phoenix, AZ 85079-6218
Phone (602) 484-0931
Fax (602) 484-0109
If you would like to donate something to the '96 auction, please contact
Cathy Ford, (805) 684-0752

1996 AFA Convention Drawing

Featuring
Super Prizes
(winner need not be present)
select your choice, check one

Handfed domestic young cockatoo - donor, Cock“A”Doodle Too
Humidaire Incubator - donor, Humidaire Incubator Co.
Tec Tronic Air Cleaner - donor, Healthway Products Inc.
Animal Intensive Care Unit - donor, Lyon Electric Co., Inc.
Breeder/Pet Cage - donor, Animal Environments
Brooder/Incubator - donor, “Pet”iatric Supply Inc.

Bird Prizes
(winner must be present)

Handfed domestic young Congo Grey - donor, Linda Laszarzig
Handfed domestic young Amazon - donor, Airborne Aviaries
Pair domestic Sun Conures - donor, Lori Gonzalas
Pair domestic Eclectus Parrots - donor, Laurella Desborough
Pair domestic White-eyed Conures - donor, Natalie Frumin-Weiss

These top two groups of (11) prizes will be drawn at the Saturday night banquet.

Special Auction Items

Avid Breeder Reader - donor, Avid
Original oil painting - donor, Bob Elgas
Play pen - donor, Expandable Habitats
Limited edition print - donor, Eric Peake
Avian clinical book - donor, Wingers Publishing
Portable Brooder - donor, Dean’s Animal Supply
Four signed and numbered prints - donor, J & M Too’s and more to come!

If you would like to donate something to the '96 auction, please contact
Cathy Ford, (805) 684-0752