Keynote Speaker At Great American Cage Bird Show

AFA president, Jerry Jennings, delivered the keynote address October 4, 1986 to attendees of the Kaytee-sponsored Great American Cage Bird Show.

The Great American Cage Bird Show sponsored by Kaytee Products was held in Chicago October 3-4, 1986 at the Ramada O'Hare Hotel. Over 2200 birds were benched, making this event one of the largest shows ever staged. An exhibitor's hall overflowed with bird enthusiasts checking out the latest bird products, while training and taming lectures were conducted throughout the day. A series of seminars were held on bird care, legislation affecting aviculture, and other subjects of avicultural importance.

Saturday evening capped the events with an excellent banquet and presentation of awards to the many show winners. Jerry Jennings, AFA president, addressed the attendees in the keynote address, "The Future of American Aviculture." Jennings traced the historical developments in aviculture over the past fifteen years and outlined the probable scenario for future changes, encouraging each breeder to examine where he or she wants to be in the fancy five, ten, or fifteen years down the road.

The success of the Great American Cage Bird Show was very encouraging and Kaytee has decided to follow this event with the Second Annual Great American Cage Bird Show in Atlanta, Georgia in the fall of 1987. ●
